Martin Luther College (MLC) is a small institution in New Ulm with less than 1,000 students.

“As a place with so many different users across several buildings, it’s a pretty complex system. Not only was Nuvera able to provide the system we needed, but our two fully redundant 10 Gig ethernet circuits from Nuvera also greatly reduce the possibility of any downtime,” said Robert Martens, Director of Information Technology at MLC.

“Each one of the dorms can fully utilize their building’s capacity. In the past, one dorm may have been acting as a bandwidth hog, causing another dorm to experience some lag. That doesn’t happen anymore.”

Martens pointed out that many of their students live off campus and their entire graduate program is an online curriculum so the need for students to reach their campus portal is critical, as well.
